

Bridging the Gaps:
A Picture of How Work Supports
Work in Ten States

Heather Boushey

Center for Economic and Policy
Research

10 October 2007

Figure 1. Share of People With a Hardships Gap, Early 2000s

Source: Bridging the Gaps Project; analysis of SIPP 2001-3 panel.

Notes: A person has a hardships gap if their income, including work supports, is lower than their family budget adjusted for work support receipt. Sample includes households comprised of families with one or two working adults and up to three children under the age of 13.

Figure 2. Share of Hardships Gap Closed by Work Supports

Source: Bridging the Gaps Project analysis of the Survey of Income and Program Participation 2001-03 panel except in the District of Columbia, where we use the Current Population Survey's Annual Social and Economic Supplement for survey years 2002-06.

Note: Families comprised of one or two adults and none, or one to three children under age 13 are included in this analysis.

Figure 3. Share of People Living in Families in Ten States with Income Below a Basic Family Budget Who are Ineligible for Work Supports

Source: Bridging the Gaps Project analysis of the Survey of Income and Program Participation 2001-03 panel except in the District of Columbia, where we use the Current Population Survey's Annual Social and Economic Supplement for survey years 2002-06.

Note: Families comprised of one or two adults and none, or one to three children under age 13 are included in this analysis. The ten states are DC, IL, IA, MA, MN, NY, NC, OH, TX, and WA.

Figure 4. Many of Those Eligible for Medicaid or SCHIP Do Not Actually Receive Benefits

Source: Bridging the Gaps Project analysis of the Survey of Income and Program Participation 2001-03 panel except in the District of Columbia, where we use the Current Population Survey's Annual Social and Economic Supplement for survey years 2002-06.

Note: Families comprised of one or two adults and none, or one to three children under age 13 are included in this analysis.

Figure 5. Many Families Living Below a Basic Family Budget are Eligible for Neither Medicaid Nor SCHIP

Source: Bridging the Gaps Project analysis of the Survey of Income and Program Participation 2001-03 panel except in the District of Columbia, where we use the Current Population Survey's Annual Social and Economic Supplement for survey years 2002-06.

Note: Families comprised of one or two adults and none, or one to three children under age 13 are included in this analysis.

Figure 6. Share of Families Below a Family Budget Pulled Above by Work Supports

Source: Bridging the Gaps Project analysis of the Survey of Income and Program Participation 2001-03 panel except in the District of Columbia, where we use the Current Population Survey's Annual Social and Economic Supplement for survey years 2002-06.

Note: Families comprised of one or two adults and none, or one to three children under age 13 are included in this analysis.